

People in Projects: Foundation for Project Success

Course Overview

The Challenge

People are the ultimate source of project success and failure. This has been documented over and over again in the CHAOS Study by the Standish Group. While capable of great accomplishments, people are also the usual cause of project failure through unrealistic expectations, poor communication, lack of executive support, inadequate customer involvement and much more. If we are to make our projects reproducibly successful, we must find solutions to these problems.

The Solution

This course moves beyond the standard project management curriculum by speaking directly to the primary causes of project success and failure. Every topic provides insight into root cause and then presents steps that participants can take to turn potential weakness into a source of strength. Participants are led through a series of exercises, each of which contributes to a Personal Action Plan. They leave with concrete, actionable plans that they can use to overcome obstacles, energize their work environment, and leverage the skills and aspirations of everyone involved in their project. Learning Objectives include:

- Learn the factors that can make or break a project or program
- Bring a Business Perspective into your projects
- Understand the true value in each project role
- Discover how to make meetings effective in your organization
- Learn how everyone can win the Estimation Game
- Gain a deeper appreciation of what it means to deal with Resistance to Change
- Discover how to make Opportunities appear in a sea of Risk
- Find out how to turn Lessons Recorded into Lessons Learned
- Learn what you can do to create a Culture of Success
