 Step One: Define institutional project goals	What do you expect from your project initiatives? Do your projects fully support established Business Goals? Is the purpose of each project clear? Is impact on the business effectively measured after project completion? Are you using these results to fine-tune your Strategy? Step One of OPMAPSM establishes how your organization can effectively turn project expectations into Business Results.
 Step Two: Assess current project process	Is your organizational culture supportive of your projects? Are requirements accurate? Is Scope controlled? Are customers engaged in the project? Are your project teams and their customers all reading from the same page? Do you know the health of each project in your portfolio? Step Two of OPMAPSM reaches to every corner of your organization to systematically reveal your Project strengths as well as opportunities for improvement.
 Step Three: Establish an Improvement Program	We all want reproducibly successful results. In Step Three of OPMAPSM, we use assessment results to define steps your organization can take to get the outcomes you want: projects aligned with Strategy, routinely successful projects and the intended impact on the business (or better!). OPMAPSM reaches all levels of the organization, from executives to project teams, to build maturity that sustains Success!
 Step Four: Monitor results for Continual Improvement	Quality 101: we can only control what we can measure. Step Four of OPMAPSM ensures that metrics defined earlier in the assessment are embedded in ongoing process and made an integral part of the culture. These metrics answer critical questions that allow you to improve Project Process, build staff skills where needed, understand the business impact of projects and strengthen Business Strategy. As your organization moves forward, let OPMAPSM light the way.
